A Satisfactory Appoi[illegible]

WASHINGTON, Feb. [illegible] There is great [illegible] selection of J. Sterling M[illegible] as his secretary [illegible] Morton is [illegible] Democrats in th[illegible] a patriot than a parti[illegible] age of silver [illegible] larity two or [illegible] own state [illegible] theory he [illegible] four years ago [illegible] pudiated by almost [illegible] in the country Mr M[illegible] interview and [illegible] Cleveland was the [illegible] ocratic party and [illegible] Mr. Morton has [illegible] diation of the [illegible] schemes of that party [illegible] for honest legislati[illegible] generally and [illegible] owners as against [illegible] the irresponsi[illegible]

J Sterling Morton [illegible] ington, where he often [illegible] before the courts the [illegible] gress. He is a railroad lawyer [illegible] 55 years old but doesn't [illegible] is of medium height, rather [illegible] broad face, a large head [illegible] mustache of the blonde gray [illegible] slight imperial. He [illegible] speaker a good lawyer [illegible] parts and an inveterate [illegible] partisan might travel a week with him [illegible] not know his party. His extreme [illegible] has made him a great favorite in Nebraska [illegible] but he is the ideal of the Cleveland [illegible] Democracy.

The Walker Failure

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Feb. 18.—The absorbing topic on the streets tonight continues to be the failure of Robert L. Walker, the banker and capitalist and the [illegible] which has been visited upon Governor McKinley. It is said that the governor [illegible] all along when he signed a [illegible] that all the previous notes had been paid [illegible] it was not so. When the crash came Mr. McKinley found that he was liable for every note that he had endorsed, aggregating $[illegible] and over. The exact amount cannot [illegible], as the affairs of Walker are in such a badly mixed up condition that a detail[illegible] cannot be made out for several days.

Just prior to the failure of the [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] Walker a[illegible] all his personal property to Governor McKinley, [illegible] about $25,000. This [illegible] the governor to pay about $40,000 [illegible] he might do but he would have to [illegible] his property and he would thus be with[illegible] a dollar in the world. However his [illegible] friends have offered to loan [illegible] to tide over the difficulty.

The Little White House.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Feb. 18. Mr. Carlisle [illegible] day with Mr. Cleveland at the "Little White House," and left for Washington [illegible] 5.30 train. Mr. Carlisle before [illegible] Mr. Cleveland had not [illegible] private secretary yet [illegible] to say anything about the attorney [illegible] or the secretary of the navy [illegible] regard to silver legislation Mr. Carlisle [illegible] he did not think the silver [illegible] at this session and [illegible] sentiment against an extra [illegible] of [illegible] for action on silver he did [illegible] think that an extra session of con[illegible] would be called unless it is absolutely [illegible]

[illegible] Berry of Arkansas called on Mr. Cleveland this morning and started for W[illegible] on the 10:05 a. m. train.

Mr. Cleveland [illegible] no announcements this [illegible] in regard to the two unfilled places in his cabinet. The selection of a man for [illegible] of agriculture who has not been [illegible] of in connection with the place casts [illegible] on the prospects of Hilary A. Her[illegible] for the navy and ex-Solicitor general [illegible] for attorney general. The chances are all in favor of dark horses from [illegible]

Lieutenant governor Sheehan and [illegible] committeeman Clark of New York arrived this evening and will be at the hotel over Sunday.

A Decision for the Republicans

T[illegible], Feb. 18. Judge Z. T. Hazen [illegible] the district court this morning sustained the motion of the Republican house for a per[illegible] nent injunction, restraining the state treas[illegible] urer from paying any warrants issued by authority of the legislative appropriation bill [illegible] by the Populist house. This is virtually a recognition of the constitution[illegible] ality of the Douglas house and the [illegible] are jubilant over the victory. Attorney gen[illegible] eral Little appeared for the state yesterday and filed a motion for the dismissal of the [illegible] ground that as the proceedings were instituted by the county attorney in the name of the state, they were instituted without state authority. He alone had authority to [illegible] such proceedings. The motion [illegible] the attorney general was overruled yes[illegible] day and the injunction was today made per[illegible] manent. The attorney general filed [illegible] of an appeal to the supreme court. The Re[illegible] publicans were represented in the case by Ch[illegible] I. Long, David Overmyer and Rep[illegible] resentative Garver. Judge W[illegible] repre[illegible] sented the Populists.

Caprivi's Speech

BERLIN, Feb. 18. Chancellor Caprivi's [illegible] yesterday in the reichstag in which he attacked the agrarian and anti-semitic party with great vigor, has caused a decided [illegible] From all the morning papers has [illegible] [illegible] upon the subject. The general [illegible] ion expressed is that the chancellor's address will exert but little influence on the factions to whom he referred. As Herr Von Ploetz who took a conspicuous part in yesterday's debate, [illegible] left for Friedrichsruhe to visit Prince Bismarck, it is inferred that the latter is at the bottom of the movement by which the conservatives have been instigated to assume their present attitude of violent op[illegible] position to the imperial government.

[illegible]

[illegible] CONGRESS SECOND SESSION

After speaking [illegible] than an hour Mr. Stewart said that he felt more [illegible] the outrage proposed to be perpetrated on civili[illegible] zation by a violent and wicked revolution, which contemplated the destruction of all the silver money of the world in the hands of the masses, the reduction of the masses of the people to penury and want and the build[illegible] ing up of a gold aristocracy to rule the United States and Europe. He moved to amend the amendment by adding to it the words [illegible] and the bonds issued under the pro[illegible] visions of this act shall not be used as security for the issuance of national bank currency.

At the close of the discussion, Mr. Mills's amendment to make the bonds redeemable at the pleasure of the government, was re[illegible] jected without a division, and Mr. Stewart's amendment that the bonds should not be used as a basis for bank circulation was also rejected. Yeas 21, nays 32. Mr. Vance [illegible] to amend the Sherman amendment by adding to it a proviso repealing the tax [illegible] state bank circulation. Mr. Morgan moved to lay Mr. Vance's amendment on the table. Agreed to, yeas 40, nays 16.

Mr. Br[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Mr. Allison said that while he would not have offered the amendment offered by Mr. Brice he would vote for it because it only made clear what all senators intended to do. He believed that the power to keep the green[illegible] backs at par would give to the secretary of the treasury complete power to keep all pa[illegible] per money [illegible] by the United States gov[illegible] ernment at [illegible] [illegible] undertake to [illegible] give [illegible] Wall [illegible] in the great markets of the [illegible] [illegible] in the form of silver [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Brice [illegible] he wanted [illegible] [illegible] no doubt [illegible]

Mr. [illegible] the Sherman [illegible]

Mr. Allison [illegible] against the Brice [illegible] predicted that if [illegible] would be increased by [illegible] dollars within the next [illegible] and for what purpose. For the [illegible] purpose of making it possible to con[illegible] [illegible] Mr. Brice said [illegible] the judgment of his [illegible] he would withdraw [illegible]

[illegible] the vote [illegible] the Sherman amendment. It [illegible] 30 nays [illegible] It [illegible] secretary of the [illegible] to maintain the re[illegible] demption of United States notes according to [illegible] provisions of the act approved January 14, 1875, entitled an act to provide for the resumption of specie payments, and at the discretion of the secretary he is authorized [illegible] sell and dispose of at not less than [illegible] either of the description of bonds authorized in said act or bonds or notes bearing not to exceed [illegible] per cent payable semi[illegible] annually and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after five years from their date with like qualities privileges and ex[illegible] emptions provided in said act for the bonds therein authorized to the extent necessary to carry said resumption act in full effect, and to use the proceeds thereof for the pur[illegible] poses provided in said act and none other."

The following is the vote in detail:

Yeas Messrs. Aldrich, Allison, Brice, Caf[illegible] fery, Chandler, Cullom, Davis, Dixon, Fel[illegible] ton, Frye, George, Gray, Hale, Hansbrough, Harris, Hawley, Higgins, Hiscock, Hoar, McMillan, McPherson, Morrill, Perkins, Sawyer, Sherman, Stockbridge, Vilas, Voor[illegible] hees, Washburn, and White—30.

Nays: Messrs. Bate, Call, Cockrell, Coke, George, Gordon, Jones of Nevada, Kyle, Mitchell, Peffer, Power, Pugh, Shoup, Stew[illegible] art, Teller and Vest—16.

No further action was taken on the sundry civil bill but Mr. Allison gave notice that he would ask the senate to remain in [illegible] on Monday until the bill was passed.

Adjourned.

JUDGE JACKSON CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—If there was at any time a disposition on the Democrats to op[illegible] pose the confirmation of Judge Jackson to be an associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, that opposition van[illegible] ished when the senate went into ex[illegible] session this afternoon. There was not even the formality of a vote. The executive jour[illegible] nal was read, containing the nomination of Judge Jackson which had previously been reported favorably, and when the president of the senate said if there are no objections the nomination will stand confirmed, not a senator opened his mouth. In this quiet way all the opposition disappeared, and Jus[illegible] tice Jackson will, as soon as convenient to him qualify for the place to which he has been appointed by a Republican president.

The New Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The question whether the governors of states which have not chosen senators within the time allotted by law can proceed to fill the vacancies if they exist after March 4, has been informally discussed by a number of members of the senate committee on elections and their opinion is that the governors have the power. The question has not been considered fully but the senators who have expressed their opinion say that a ruling ought to be made in the [illegible], which would not deprive a state of its equal representation in the senate.

The vacancy will not [illegible] until March and the governor cannot well appoint until the vacancy actually occurs, but it is believed that he can [illegible] a senator to act until a choice is made at some subse[illegible] quent meeting of the legislature. This will enable the Republican governors of Wash[illegible] ington and Montana to appoint Republican senators while the Democratic governor of Wyoming will be able to designate a Demo[illegible] crat and the Populist governor of North Dakota a Democrat or Populist. It will not change materially the complexion of the senate to have the senators named by the governor, and they will not be present when the senate meets in March to take part in the organization.

There is reported to be a growing feeling among the Democratic senators that it is not worth while to attempt an organization of the senate officers at the special session. Vice-president Stephenson will preside and it will not be of sufficient importance whether a president pro-tempore is chosen or not unless the Democratic senators desire to keep Judge Gresham one degree farther from the presidential succession. The Democrats have now chosen 43 senators, including Mar[illegible] tin of Kansas, without counting any of the Populists. If four vacancies exist on March 4 the senate will stand Democrats, 43; Populists, 2; Republicans [illegible]. The Re[illegible] publicans cannot by any combination of cir[illegible] cumstances obtain the majority in the sen[illegible] ate even if Stewart and Peffer act with them. One more Democratic senator will give that party complete control of the sen[illegible] ate even when it is full and the forty-three senators already chosen make a clear major[illegible] ity of the [illegible] if four seats are vacant.

The Democratic leaders may decide to go ahead with the work of reorganizing the committee and choosing new officers, but some of them are disposed to wait until December. They will then know their exact strength, the senate will be full and there will be no trouble in adjusting committee places for the new senators who afterward [illegible]. If an extra session of both houses of congress should be summoned to deal with the repeal of the Sherman act and the bond question complete reorganization would be necessary in order to [illegible] com[illegible] mittees in harmony with Mr. Cleveland's views.

A Reception to President Harrison.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 18.—Admirers of Pres[illegible] ident Harrison are arranging to give him a reception when he returns from Washington next month. Several club organizations will take part in it. The arrangements are in charge of the Columbia club and meetings of special committees were held today for the purpose of taking the preliminary steps. There will be [illegible] of welcome by prom[illegible] inent members of the party and [illegible] will join in a street demonstration. It is [illegible] that the president has [illegible] of his friends, but [illegible] definitely decided the [illegible]

[illegible] Collision on the Colorado Midland Railroad

THREE EMPLOYEES MET DEATH

[illegible] One Fired and Three Families Mourn A Number of Passengers Slightly Injured The Damage to the Rolling Stock Slight

[illegible] Colorado Springs. Two [illegible] at Bath [illegible] These were Engineer Frank M[illegible] Fireman Joseph McIntyre and [illegible] Joel Bowersock. Four passen[illegible] [illegible] being [illegible] [illegible] trains which met were No. 2 coming [illegible] charge of Conductor Riley Miller and [illegible] west in charge of Conductor [illegible] Both trains were late [illegible] and [illegible] forty minutes. They [illegible] at Bath and was about a half [illegible] the collision took place [illegible] trying to reach Bath before [illegible] the siding. They met in a cut [illegible] was also a curve. The trains met [illegible] the slightest warning. The engines [illegible] together and then remained inter[illegible] upon the track. The smoking cars [illegible] and were filled in a moment with [illegible] iron debris. The passengers in [illegible], however, in several instances [illegible] a pile of seats and were res[illegible] [illegible] difficulty and none too soon, for [illegible] out from the car stove. It was [illegible] however before burning the [illegible] considerably. The passengers were all [illegible] frightened and all the horrors of a [illegible] were brought vividly before them. [illegible] who were uninjured set quickly to [illegible] and succeeded in rescuing the unfortu[illegible] nate ones who were under the debris.

The engineer of No. 2, Frank B. McCam[illegible] was buried beneath his engine. He was taken out in a horribly bruised and scalded condition and placed in a Pullman. He died at 6 o'clock in the morning.

The fireman of No. 3, Frank McIntyre, was killed instantly.

The brakeman Joel Bowersock, was crushed between the coach and death was instantaneous.

Conductor Miller was considerably cut about the head and Engineer K[illegible] was bruised. Both these kept pluckily at work in helping to rescue the [illegible] and in clearing away the debris.

None of the passengers beyond the [illegible] above stated were hurt, but all received a severe shaking up.

Immediately upon the arrival of the news in this city a relief train was made up with physicians and supplies. They arrived on the scene at 7 o'clock and quickly attended to the wants of the wounded.

All day long the friends and acquaintances of the killed and injured waited for the re[illegible] lief train to return. It came into Colorado City about 4:20 p.m. A large crowd [illegible] [illegible] Engineer K[illegible] was one of the first to get off. He walked slowly to the waiting carriage and throwing his arms around his wife, [illegible] her as if in thankfulness that his life [illegible] spared.

In the yard of the little [illegible] of Engineer McCammon, on Colorado avenue, three young children played and talked and [illegible] [illegible] while the grief-stricken mother had her face and [illegible] the father and protector of the house had thus [illegible] taken away.

J. H. McIntyre, the dead fireman, [illegible] on Monroe avenue, Colorado City. He leaves a wife and two children.

J. P. Bowersock, the dead brakeman, [illegible] at 31 Stillman [illegible], Colorado Springs. He leaves a wife and [illegible] child. All of the dead men were members of El Paso lodge, K. of P. of Colorado City, and the funeral services which will probably take place to-day, will be held under the auspices of the order. All were old and re[illegible] spected employes of the Midland.

[illegible] train arrived in Colorado [illegible] stopped at [illegible] [illegible] removed to Fairley's [illegible] [illegible] were removed to [illegible] on Stillman [illegible]

[illegible]

Among the [illegible]-bound [illegible] was Mr. A. Andrews of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. An[illegible] [illegible] experience which he will [illegible] [illegible] "We were climbing the hill this side of Bath when the [illegible] occur[illegible] red. I was in the Pullman and [illegible] smoking car in front of us came [illegible] into ours and the debris flew in all directions. I cer[illegible] tainly thought as I saw the lights and felt the shock that we would all go into eternity in a moment. But none in our car seemed very badly injured and we at once began to [illegible] out. One lady [illegible] buried [illegible] under half a dozen [illegible] and [illegible] pretty se[illegible] verely injured. After a considerable time the engineer and fireman were taken out. Engineer McCammon was taken into a Pull[illegible] man. He saw that he could not live and so made his will, and then I saw him die. His sufferings were terrible and he was fright[illegible] fully injured. At the time he cried out, 'My God, cannot some one bring a doctor to help me to die easy,' and so he soon passed away. But it was a terrible ordeal and I shall re[illegible] member Hill Top as long as I live."

MR. A. H. BRAKE

Mr. A. H. Brake of Colorado Springs was [illegible] on the east bound train [illegible] arrived in town yesterday after[illegible] noon he bore marks of rough travel. His [illegible] was stained with blood. "That," said [illegible] came from a woman in our car that I [illegible] my best to rescue and finally got out. She was piled under a number of seats when the crash came and suffered terribly until [illegible] got her out. Her head and shoulders were bruised and we got her out none too soon for the seats in the car had begun to take fire. Everything was jammed together and it was a miracle that all of us were not killed. It [illegible] as if the car was filled with flying iron and wood. If the car [illegible] been filled there would have been many more fatalities."

At a late hour last night it is learned that the cause of the death of Brakeman Bower[illegible] sock was a blow in the left temple. When found he was lying on the forward platform of the day coach completely covered with debris. Death must have been instanta[illegible] neous.

Engineer McCammon was found with his head [illegible] up against the boiler. An arm and leg were broken and his head and upper portion of his body were severely burned and scalded with steam, the latter being the cause of death.

Fi[illegible] McIntyre was killed [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Colorado [illegible] take part this afternoon at Colorado City under the auspices of the K of P lodge, the Masons and Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen.

SENATORIAL CONTESTS

WYOMING

CHEYENNE, Feb. 18.—The senatorial con[illegible] test in this state is at an end. The state legis[illegible] lature is also at an end. They both passed away together this noon amid the jeers of an indignant and outraged public. The num[illegible] ber of visitors at the capitol this morning to witness the last joint ballot of the legisla[illegible] ture, ran into the thousands and all displayed a nervousness as it was known that if a sena[illegible] tor was to be chosen for the term of six years, he would have to be chosen at that bal[illegible] lot.

Republicans, Populists and Democrats all held separate and concerted caucuses for the most part of last night and nearly all this morning but about the only agreement that was reached was to adjourn sine die.

As soon as the chief clerks of the respect[illegible] ive houses had called the rolls, Snyder, a Populist member from Johnson county moved the joint session adjourn sine die. Chatterton, a Republican seconded the mo[illegible] tion and it carried, Republicans, Populists and fully a dozen Democrats voting in fa[illegible] vor of the motion.

This morning it was discovered that Rus[illegible] sell the Mormon Republican senator of Uintah county was found to have joined the new forces. Senator McCormick [illegible] night walked out of the Republican caucus saying that he was no longer a member of that party, but had joined the Populists. The Republicans, finding out how matters stood, made a deal with a Populist [illegible] journal [illegible] adjourn sine die without taking a ballot. The [illegible] selection of a senator to the governor, pro[illegible] vided it is shown that such an act will be le[illegible] gal. If the governor can appoint, John C. AMERICA'S FOREIGN RELATIONS.

—The United States has been ... its future possibilities seem ... But it is not so great nor is it ... of all dangers that ... afford to neglect ... which ... It is ... that with the growth of the nation ... as well as with the progress of the time ... new departure in ... of government ... and national ... they are in every other department of human activity, but the fundamental principles of the government should remain un... and there are dangers which are not decreased by an increase in wealth and population.

Of the innovations from established policy which are most dangerous because most tempting, prominent to-day is that of entangling relations with foreign powers. The spirit of covetousness ... upon the territory of our neighbors: we annex Hawaii, we covet West Indian islands, we court Canadian ... and in so doing we endanger the republic whose homogeneity of people and interest is its chief safeguard. Here ... we are the traditional friends of a great empire and sympathize with the political institutions of the greatest of European republics we ... an offensive and defensive alliance with Russia and France ... Our great ... in the diversity of institutions between the ... of the north and the people of the south. Our ... danger of to-day, is in the inferiority in race and ... of certain classes of our population, native and introduced. Great ... of our citizens are ignorant of our laws, unaware of our history careless of our privileges. Ignorant Americans, ignorant Chinese, ignorant Jews and Poles and Bohemians and Hungarians are objectionable not because of their race but because of their ignorance ... The American flag is broad enough to cover all Americans who are Americans in the spirit of our institutions and in the patriotism of the founders of the republic but it will not benefit America nor the world to extend our national boundaries to make room for more selected European dregs.

Times change, and we change with them. The policy that was wise in the days of Washington may not be wise in our own day. We have taken a position in relation to our own hemisphere which requires a larger outlook than was possible a hundred years ago. But keeping European nations from hegemony in all American affairs does not necessarily involve the incorporation of all American lands into our own political system. We ought to control the Nicaragua canal but we need not therefore annex Nicaragua. And leadership on this hemisphere does not necessarily involve participation in European diplomatic rivalries.

While we have in some measure outgrown the policy of Washington there are yet in his Farewell Address words that to these days we shall do well to heed.

"Against the insiduous wiles of foreign influence I conjure you to believe me fellow-citizens, the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of a republican government. But that jealousy to be useful must be impartial else it becomes the influence to be avoided instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots who may resist the intrigue of the favorite are liable to become suspected and odious while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people to surrender their interests.

"The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political relation as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

"Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or in the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected; when belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not lightly hazard the giving us provocation; when we may choose peace or war as our interest, guided by our justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?

"It is our policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far I mean as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. (I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs, that honesty is always the best policy.) I repeat it, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

"Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies."

NOW FOR THE KINDERGARTEN.

The Supreme Court of the State has handed down an opinion upon the constitutionality of the proposed State Kindergarten bill which effectually disposes of any objections to the bill that are founded on a strict construction of our organic law. In Article II Section 3, of the State Constitution the following language is used:

"The general assembly shall as soon as practicable provide for the establishment and maintenance of a thorough and uniform system of public schools throughout the state, wherein all residents of the state between the ages of 6 and 21 years may be educated gratuitously. One or more public schools shall be maintained in each school district within the state, at least three months in each year; any school district failing to have such school shall not be entitled to receive any portion of the school fund for that year."

The question before the court was, whether this language is to be construed as prohibitory of schools for persons under six or over twenty one years of age, or only mandatory as to persons within the fifteen years mentioned. As to this point the court says:

"It is, therefore, the constitution in express terms or by necessary implication limits the legislature may exercise its sovereign power in any way that in its judgment, will best subserve the general welfare.

Read in the light of this rule of interpretation, and the wise and liberal policy of the state in educational matters, the ... clearly mandatory and requires affirmative action on the part of the legislature to the extent and in the manner specified, and is in no measure prohibitory or a limitation of its power to provide free schools for children under six years of age, whenever it deems it wise and beneficial to do so. This view is in harmony with other sections of the same article.

The bill is therefore constitutional and that point is settled. The question remains whether it is expedient.

So far as we know, the educators of the State are unanimously in favor of State Kindergartens. The State Teachers' Association has passed formal resolutions approving the plan. If there are details in the present bill that are open to objection let them be changed but some bill providing for the institution of free kindergartens as part of the State school system wherever a majority of the voters of any place so desire should be passed at this session.

THE ORATORICAL CONTEST.

The ninth annual contest of the Colorado State Oratorical Association has come and gone and again Colorado college has been fortunate enough to win the first place. The contest was a noteworthy one in several particulars: first of all because of the worthiness of the contestants and the excellence of their work. There were two speakers from each of our institutions of collegiate rank, the State university, the University of Denver and Colorado college.

There are other matters, however, in a contest of this sort, of far wider import and interest than the disposition of championship honors on any one occasion. This brings joy to some one college and disappointment to the others. But the simple fact of such a contest carried on in the spirit of friendly emulation is itself an educating influence of great power. For the time being each college enters a little into the life of the others. There is an exchange of ideas and a widening of interests, and there is a powerful stimulus to the spirit of college loyalty. The importance of these things to the true life of a college cannot be overestimated. We grow through contact with others and we grow through the enthusiasm allied to our own life. The hilarity of college students is peculiarly infectious, more infectious than musical often, but the college spirit from which it springs will find its vent in more thoroughgoing class room work just as sure as in the latest yell.

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

Colorado leads all the States of the Union in the area of government forest land reserved from sale by proclamation of the President. This means that the conservation of the forests in this State is in advance of any other. It means that the first steps have been taken for the preservation of the natural reservoirs which the forests provide for the storage of water, mainly for irrigation. It means the saving of millions of dollars which must otherwise be required for artificial reservoirs throughout the State. It means the preservation of the most beautiful part of our mountain scenery which attracts such visitors as to the wonders of ...

To Colonel E. T. Ensign of Colorado Springs, more than to any one else, should be given the credit of what has been done in the creation of these reservations. For two years he ably filled the position of State Forest Commissioner, and for over a year has been engaged in the work of examining for the government the various reservations requested in Colorado. To his indefatigable labors we owe all the reservations in Colorado but one. His action has always been so conservative and so well sustained by the best public sentiment of the state that he has encountered little or no opposition. In short his heart is in the work and with the knowledge of the whole state and of the requirements of the forest which he has obtained by long study and experience no better man could be found for this purpose as the results already obtained plainly show.

It is to be hoped that the new Department of Interior under the coming change of administration will continue Colonel Ensign in his present work which he has carried on through both Republican and Democratic administrations. Much has been accomplished but much remains to be done, which, if not well done, had better be left undone.

"AVENUE DE L'ENFANT."

Every citizen of the Republic is, or ought to be interested in our national capital and proud of its beauty and its glory. The discussion now in progress about the re-naming of Sixteenth street in Washington should therefore have some interest for the people of Colorado as well as for those who live in the District of Columbia.

Not long ago a petition was circulated and widely signed, asking that the name be changed to Executive Avenue. Among those who signed it was Kate Field. But she has changed her mind, and is now advocating with all her might and that means much—the name of "Avenue de L'Enfant."

The great French engineer who planned the Capital City has no memorial in this most splendid triumph of his genius, except that there is a "L'Enfant public school." Major L'Enfant looked ahead a century when he laid out the city, and for more than half that time scarce any one recognized the beauty of his plan or its splendid possibilities. Now, however, when the city has grown pretty nearly up to his conception of what it ought to be, every one who thinks twice realizes that the engineer who could look so far into the future and plan so well for splendid results must have been a great man. It is only just that his name should be given to some street or square or permanent building, and perpetuated as part of the local nomenclature of the city which he projected. Of the only real objection to the name, Kate Field has this to say:

There is only one ... against the adoption of Avenue L'Enfant, and that is the opportunity afforded a mispronunciation. It cannot be claimed that Avenue L'Enfant is unmusical and as it is the business of schools to teach pronunciation it would not be long before students of all ... would be ... what all educated people could speak correctly as well as ... while running. It will be ... injustice to ignore the man who planned this splendid city because his name is not Smith. Not one person in one hundred thousand pronounces Lafayette properly. The worst that can be done with L'Enfant is to flatten the e and sound the t: this is nothing of the sphere compared with the torn given "Le Droit Park."

By all means, if Sixteenth street is to be renamed let it be called after Major L'Enfant.

Of the only two cabinet places yet remaining unfilled by Mr Cleveland, the probabilities favor Mr Herbert of Alabama for Secretary of the Navy and Governor Boies of Iowa for Attorney General. If they are appointed, the cabinet will contain two men from the East, Bissell and Lamont, two from the middle States, Gresham and Carlisle, two from the South, Smith and Herbert, and two from the West, Morton and Boies. This would seem to be a fair division, geographically speaking, although the people of the Rocky Mountain region and the Pacific Slope hardly regard Iowa and Nebraska as really western.

We sincerely congratulate the people of this city, the students of Colorado College and the young man himself, on the signal honor won in Denver Friday evening by Mr Frank W Woods. Mr Woods well deserved the honor of representing the State at the greater Oratorical Contest to be held in May. In thought and diction his oration was worthy of great praise, and his delivery is clear and earnest. Mr Woods has done well; we are all proud of him, and hope he will do still better.

Mr Cleveland has chosen Mr J Sterling Morton of Nebraska, as his Secretary of Agriculture apparently because Mr Morton is a "tariff smasher." He also represents the Great West because he lives in Nebraska. We hope Mr Morton will make a good secretary, but the man who takes General Rusk's place will not find it easy to do as well as he has done.

The Democrats gave up hope yesterday of electing a Senator either in Montana or in Wyoming. In the former State the new Senator will probably be appointed by Governor Richards who is a Republican. In Wyoming the legislative session yesterday came to an end and the Populist Governor will appoint Governor Warren's successor.

Many Americans who never saw Governor McKinley will be sincerely grieved to hear that he has lost probably all the property he has in the failure of Robert L. Walker of Youngstown. McKinley is a man of whose character and talents all Americans may justly be proud.

The simple and touching appeal of the Princess Kaiulani to the American people which we publish in another column to-day will help, we trust, to cool the fever in the blood of some of our hasty contemporaries and statesmen.

Superintendent Byrnes of the New York Police is just too innocent for anything. He had never heard of the proposed fight between Mitchell and Corbett till he read it in yesterday's papers.

Judge Jackson is now Justice Jackson. It is well. We trust he will prove an honor to the great body of which he becomes a member.

A WEEK OF TOIL.

THE NINTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY GETS DOWN TO BUSINESS

Boring ... and Steady Work ... Bill. The Cripple Creek County. Representative Baldwin Congratulates the Kansas Republicans

[Special Correspondence.]

DENVER, Feb. 18. This has been a week of quiet continuous toil on the part of both houses of the Ninth general assembly. They were content to give the Kansas legislature a monopoly of turmoil. A number of caucuses were held and these together with much committee work after the regular sessions of the day has not made the life of a member a midsummer holiday. There are few if any drones in the hive. The members from the outside districts have ... their eyes in the seven weeks that have passed since their arrival among the clanging street cars and din of metropolitan traffic and are as fully alive to the most intricate situations as any of the old timers. As a whole the Ninth is as bright a body and as earnest a body as has sat since the fair brow of Colorado was crowned with statehood and the results will be most gratifying to the people of the commonwealth.

Last evening the committees from both houses on state institutions, finance and appropriations left in a special train over the Rio Grande for Monte Vista, where they arrived to-day and investigated the Soldiers' home. Sunday morning will be spent at the Buena Vista reformatory. At noon the party will arrive at the penitentiary at Canon City where they will remain until night. Monday morning will find them at the Insane asylum at Pueblo. They expect to arrive in Denver at 6 o'clock on that evening. A number of the members of the committees were accompanied by their wives.

Next Thursday evening the Colorado assembly will leave on a special Santa Fe train for El Paso to return the visit of the New Mexico legislature. They will return Tuesday following, by way of the Rio Grande. The New Mexico members were greeted by a cold norther upon their arrival, which during the night was succeeded by a snow storm. They were banqueted at the Windsor Monday night, and given carriage rides over the city. Tuesday night they looked on at the brilliant Colonial ball at the Brown Palace. As soon as they returned the weather was beautiful again.

Senator Armstrong's eight hour bill has been sent to the revision committee with recommendations for final passage. The original bill was considerably disfigured before it left the senate committee of the whole. Section 3, which provided that no franchise or privilege be granted any corporation except upon the condition that all employees work eight hours, was rejected. Senator ... wanted to amend to include every body under the eight-hour law employees, farmers, etc. It was rejected. As virtually ... this most important bill now reads:

"Section 1. On and after the passage of this act, eight hours shall constitute a legal day's work for all ... of mechanics, workingmen and laborers employed in any occupation in the State of Colorado.

"Sec. 2. In all work hereafter undertaken in behalf of the state, or any county, township, school district, municipality or incorporated town, no mechanic, workingman or laborer shall be employed more than eight hours a day, and it shall be unlawful for any board officer, agent, or any contractor or sub-contractor thereof to employ any mechanic, workingman or laborer in the prosecution of any such work more than eight hours a day.

"Sec. 3. Nothing in sections 1 or 2 of this act shall be construed so as to prevent work in excess of eight hours a day in emergency ... provided, that hours in excess of eight a day shall be treated as constituting a part of a subsequent day's work, and, provided that in no case shall, of seven days shall there be permitted more than fifty-six hours of labor. Any violation hereof shall be unlawful.

"Sec. 4. Any person, board or officer or person employed who shall violate the provisions of sections 1, 2 and 3 of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not less than $100 nor more than $500 or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than 100 days, or by both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court.

The committee on county lines listened last night to the advocates of the new county which cuts off the Cripple Creek district from El Paso county. There were present to advocate the measure Messrs. Montgomery, Brown, Pullin, McClelland, Mr Donnett of the firm of Bennett & Myers, Mr Sheppard the editor of the Cripple Creek Miner and several others. There ... no one to present the opposite side of the question and the committee decided to make no report until the opposition had an opportunity to be heard.

A number of changes have been made in the bill by its advocates. Fremont county has been cut out of the proposed new county and more of El Paso taken in. Another matter which is as yet undecided is the name of the infant. First it was Rhyolite, then Cripple Creek, then Waite and now they are debating calling it McGovney, Leddy, Baldwin, etc.

Mr Baldwin's bill, No. 270, providing for the burial of old soldiers has passed the house.

As before mentioned Representative Baldwin likes warlike apparel and the attendant glitter, glory and gore. The contest between the Republican and the Populist house in Kansas was watched by him with eager eye and he impoverished himself buying the special editions of the Times and Sun spring upon the public every 15 minutes with fifteen or twenty additional words of news from the seat of war. Yesterday Mr Baldwin drew up a paper extending congratulations and thanks for the superhuman courage shown in the terrible contest in which you have lately been engaged in securing your rights. * * * We beg leave to subscribe ourselves as yours truly now and forever and that for all time throughout the ceaseless ages in prosperity and adversity in war or in peace we stand ... as brothers, undaunted by the cry of war or the noise of battle.

The resolution was a corker. Frank W Woods would not have had a ghost of a show for first honors at the State Oratorical contest last night had any other student incorporated Mr Baldwin's stirring words into his oration. The paper was signed by Republican members of the house and forwarded to Topeka.

Ex-Postmaster Meier of Colorado Springs was a guest of Senator Leddy during the week.

Praise for J. Sterling Morton

COLORADO SPRINGS, ... To the Editor of THE GAZETTE.

DEAR SIR: Let ... congratulate the nation ... upon the ... of agriculture, Hon J Sterling Morton of Nebraska—both ... President Cleveland for not only his recognition of the claims of the west for a place in his cabinet, but also for his good fortune in finding for that most important position one so eminently qualified by lifelong service to give to the bureau the benefits of a ripe and fruitful experience; and I would also congratulate the agricultural interests of the whole country but more especially those of the west on their good fortune in having one in this position who is familiar with the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the British ... to the Gulf, and will not have to devote ... half of his term of office in ... half of the time that a portion of the great agricultural domain lies west of the Missouri river.

All I wish to add that I lived almost a neighbor to Mr Morton in Nebraska for over thirty years and I can say from a long personal acquaintance that a better selection could not have been made and a man more devoted to agricultural interests would be difficult to find.

It was J Sterling Morton who procured the passage of the bill in the Nebraska legislature over twenty five years ago establishing Arbor Day and dedicating it as a holiday to be devoted to the planting of trees which has been copied by many other western states, and from which is due in a large degree the converting of the Great American Desert into a country of beautiful homes and a land of unequaled fertility on the American continent.

I can endorse every word of the article in your paper this morning from New York headed "A Strong Tariff Reformer." Mr Morton has ever been ready in the face of certain defeat when all other Democrats in the state have declined to sacrifice themselves upon the political altar to accept nominations on the state ticket and willingly spend his time and money in conducting campaigns, as freely as he could have done had he been certain of success.

In brief Hon J Sterling Morton is a "simon pure and rock ribbed Democrat" and at the same time well qualified by education and experience to fill the position to which he has been selected.

What Denver Papers Say

The Poet's Mission was the subject of Mr Woods of Colorado college. His ideas were given with a directness, a delicacy and an eloquence which marked him a rhetorician of no mean order. His declamation was of a forcible and finished character.

Not one wondered at the close of it all that the judges awarded him the first prize. All the colleges united in applauding the decision. [Denver Republican.

The last speaker was Frank W Woods of Colorado college, whose theme was "The Poet's Mission." Mr Woods has a smooth and finished method of delivery which seldom rises above a monotone, and he handled his subject with a depth and delicacy of sentiment which captivated his audience and evidently the judges as well.—[Rocky Mountain News.

It comes from Montana though it has been a state for some time, has as yet no seal. The trouble in the new states over the election of senators," said a cabinet member "recalls a remark President Harrison made soon after he came into office. There had been a bill put into the senate designed to legalize the actions of some well known people in several of the states. POPULATION OF COLORADO SPRINGS

A. D. 1900 — 40,000.

There is no reason why the rate of increase will not be as great as for the past seven years. It ought to be greater. The city will then cover three times the territory it does at present

— DOES ANY ONE DOUBT

That in seven years the value of every foot of ground in and around the city will have doubled? Well! that is better than 10 per cent compound interest. A superb investment! Colorado Springs real estate is the best gold mine you can strike. It has always paid good dividends.

A Big Advertisement.

The March number of Tansill's Pun[ch], the publication which Mr R W Tansill uses as a means of making the Tansill cigars famous the world over, reached the city yesterday. It contains an article descriptive of Colorado Springs written by Mr Geo Rex Buckman for the New Year's number of the Republican and Telegraph and besides eight half tone cuts showing scenes in and about the city. This number of the magazine has an issue of 17,000 copies and is distributed free throughout the United States. It is only another evidence of the interest which Mr Tansill has always shown in our city, which he has now chosen as his permanent home. He has built up a fortune and a splendid business largely by knowing how to advertise, and he has started in to give this city some of the benefit of his experience. May Colorado Springs through his efforts become to the other cities of the country what Tansill's cigar establishment is to the tobacco trade of the country is THE GAZETTE'S wish. The following is the editorial comment from Punch:

We congratulate the readers of Punch upon being able to present to them in this issue a notable article regarding a notable place. We are also fortunate in having been able to secure for its illustration a series of plates from a book entitled "Colorado Springs and Its Famous Scenic Environs," by George Rex Buckman—an elegant and indeed truly sumptuous publication which the press both of America and the Old World has united in characterizing as the finest thing of its kind ever produced. The article we reprint, and which is likewise from Mr. Buckman's pen, secured the first prize in a contest recently instituted by The Republic and Telegraph, the enterprising afternoon paper of Colorado Springs; and it is generally conceded to be the best condensed descriptive article ever written about this world famous health and pleasure resort. Those of our readers who have ever visited this land of sunshine at the foot of Pike's Peak will find in the article and its illustrations delightful reminders of their visit; while those to whom the region is as yet an undiscovered country, will, we are sure, be filled with a desire to see with their own eyes the beauties and glories which the article so admirably sets forth.

Fun on the Bristol.

Mr. John F. Sheridan, in his world famous eccentric character of "Widow O'Brien" in that big comedy success, "Fun on the Bristol," will be seen at the opera house Monday, Feb. 27, supported by one of the largest company of players now upon the road.

Says an exchange: "Aside from Mr. Sheridan, in his incomparable specialties, will be seen the Yum-Ki-Poo groupe of Japanese dancers; Misses Marion and Post, the popular grotesque song and dance artists; Miss Gracie Whiteford, whose reputation in England and Australia as a soubrette of excellence and ability is unparalleled; Mlle. Blanche Siegrist, the famous Parisian vocalist and danseuse, and one of the handsomest costumed ladies upon the stage. Mlle. Siegrist's costumes are marvels of milliner's art and taste. She is also considered the peer of the celebrated French artists, Yvonne and Fougerre, to whom she is related. Other members of this large company display their abilities in numerous specialties entirely new and novel in this country, and the entertainment as a whole, adds new life and brings once more into the front rank of theatrical amusements the original comedy success, 'Fun on the Bristol.'"

College Rhetoricals.

Rhetoricals will be held at Colorado College Monday morning, beginning at twenty minutes of 11 o'clock. Visitors are welcome. The speakers and their subjects will be as follows:

"Abraham Lincoln, the Typical American"—Mr. F. A. Rowell.

"Walter Scott, the Poet Historian"—Miss Pearl Cooper.

"The [illegible] of [illegible]" Mr. William Swift.

"The [illegible] for Sentiment" Miss Jessie Dudley.

THE CHURCHES.

All Souls' church, corner Tejon and Dale streets, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Mellen, will preach at 11 o'clock. Subject "Lent." Sunday school at 12:15. No evening service.

First Christian church, the pastor, W. S. Priest, will preach at the usual hours to-day. Morning subject: "Mutual Christian Duties." Evening subject: "The C. W. B. M." Sunday school 9:45 a. m. Y. P. S. C. E. 6:30 p. m. All cordially invited.

Sunday services at the First Congregational church, corner of Tejon and St. Vrain streets, at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. In the morning Rev. W. S. Hawkes of Salt Lake will preach. In the evening Prof. E. S. Parsons will give the first of the series of Lenten sermons elsewhere announced. Subject, Moral Foundations.

First English Lutheran, corner of Kiowa and Weber streets. Rev. D. Z. Foulk, pastor. Services 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Morning: "Forgiveness and Forgiveness," the sixth in a series on the Lord's Prayer. Evening: "The Average Man." Y. P. S. C. E. 6:30 p. m. Sabbath school 9:45 a. m. A welcome to all.

The Progressive Spiritualists will not hold a meeting to-day owing to the fact that they have no speaker. Mr. and Mrs. Kates left for the east during the week. They were here for seven Sundays and during that time created considerable interest and had large audiences. They expect to return during the coming summer.

Lenten Sermons.

Beginning this evening and continuing through the Sunday evenings of Lent, a series of Lenten sermons will be given at the First Congregational church. The preachers and subjects will be as follows:

Feb 19. Rev. E. S. Parsons, "Moral Foundations."

Feb 26. Rev. Richard Montague, D. D., "A Spiritual Church."

March 5. Rev. A. G. Upton, "The Divine Fellowship."

March 12. Rev. William Ball, "The Christian Life a Growth."

March 19. Rev. Lavington Taylor, subject to be announced.

March 26.—Dr. W. F. Slocum, "The Religious [illegible] in Education."

MINING STOCKS.

... centered in Anaconda with ... Pharmacist ... The sharp advance ... [illegible] ... the management is better than ever before, and the output is nearing completion with a short distance of the mines, which will treat their ores at a low cost. Everything indicates that Anaconda will continue its upward movement.

Work stock was next in activity to Anaconda. A number of large holders attempted to realize during the week, and this caused some depression in the price; but whenever the stock was offered at reasonable figures, either in large or small blocks, it found ready purchase by good buyers. It is promised that another large shipment of ore will be made within a short time. The ruling price was 8½c bid, and 8¾c asked.

Pharmacist paid its monthly dividend of one cent a share on the 15th inst. A slight decline in the price of the stock to 28c. took place toward the close of the week, but no clear reason is known for this. Jack Pot sold at 1¼ to 1½c. Cleopatra at from 10 to 12c. Calument at from 4½ to 5½c. Isabella at from 15½ to 18c, and Blue Bell at from 4½ to 5c.

The demand for stocks from the east was larger than ever before, and it is evident that eastern buying has become a most important factor in the general market. Considerable Mollie Gibson was sent to the east at from $7.50 to $7.70. Argentum was quiet at 63 and 64c bid and Lembi at from $1.27 to $1.30. Altogether it was one of the most satisfactory weeks of stock trading experienced within a long time.

C. H. Evans & Co. announce to-day the opening of the new spring styles for 1893 of the celebrated Dunlap & Co., Fifth Avenue New York hats on Thursday, February 23. Mr. Evans is the exclusive agent for the Dunlap hat in the city. A fine line of spring overcoats, fancy vests and tennis suits have also just been received.

The special sale at Giddings Bros & Bent during the last week drew great crowds to the store. It has been a success and their patrons have reaped the benefit. During this week, commencing to-morrow, they will place on sale an elegant line of French novelty dress goods of their own importation from Paris. Their lines of Anderson's ginghams and French and domestic satteens are also very complete.

Colorado Springs is an important point in the nursery line, and Wm Clark seems to be doing the business. His wholesale trade reaches all over this as well as the adjoining states and territories. Not a little of this business is sent to Denver, for during this season, which lasts about four months, he sends 6000 violets to that place every week. This year Mr. Clark is growing over 50,000 pansies, while other years he never had over 25,000, and in nearly all the other lines he is having almost the same proportionate increase.

Attention is called to the advertisement on another page of R. Douglas Crockery company of Denver, Colo., one of the largest crockery stocks of the United States. Appreciating the fact that the people of this city are large consumers of fine china, glass and bric-a-brac, this firm has purchased space in this paper that their name may be brought more prominently before our people. The establishment is located at 1625, 1627, 1629 and 1631 California street, occupies four floors which are completely filled with choice goods. Those unable to satisfy their wants in the home market are commended to R. Douglas Crockery company with the assurance that their orders will be promptly and satisfactorily executed. When in Denver a visit to this establishment will be not only a pleasurable pastime but an artistic treat.

Business lots on Bennett Ave., between Second and Fourth Sts., in Cripple Creek have advanced 25 per cent. within the past ten days. Kissel, Otis & Connor of 104 Pike's Peak Ave., were large purchasers yesterday.

The Shenandoah Valley.

SHENANDOAH, COLO., Feb. 9, 1893.

To the Editor of THE GAZETTE

I have received a great many letters of inquiry from people residing in Colorado Springs in reference to the Shenandoah valley, which, to reply to each one, would be too much of a task. If you will kindly allow me space in your valuable paper, I will state briefly the facts regarding this fertile valley in the hope that all who have written me on the subject may read it.

The Shenandoah valley is situated in the northern part of San Miguel county and the south-western part of Montrose county, and probably 400 miles south-west of Colorado Springs. It is a very fertile valley and beautifully situated, and there are thousands of acres of good farm land open to pre-emption, homestead and desert entries. Natural resources are great; such as timber, coal, building stone, while the climate is perfect. It is in the great fruit belt of the western slope, and fruits of all kinds can be grown here. The markets are first-class and the farmer gets a good price for all he can raise. It is also a fine grain country.

A perfect system of irrigation is in vogue here and the company supply an abundance of soft mountain water for all purposes. Those who wish for further information can obtain the same by sending for a copy of the Shenandoah Tribune.

Yours very truly,
J. H. BRANDENBURY.

There is more money to be made in Cripple Creek real estate just now than in any other investment. For information call on Kissel, Otis & Connor, 104 Pike's Peak Ave.

Furniture Talk.

We are told by people in and out of town, that Furniture from Kilpatrick's needs no looking after; it's correct every time. But it's taken hard work and careful research in the furniture markets to bring this stock to the top, and there's plenty of room at the top. Same time we occupy it ALONE. This week our $60 Oak Chamber Suits go at $50. Side-boards and Dining Tables are crying for notice, and they'll get it soon.

Indians at the Fair.

WASHINGTON Feb. 18.—Secretary Noble today granted the request of Mrs. Potter Palmer the president of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian Exposition for permission to bring to the exposition a number of Indian children from the Ramona Indian school in New Mexico to illustrate the methods of Indian education. The Ramona Indian school was founded and endowed by Mrs Helen Hunt Jackson, (H H) some years before her death and is considered a model institution of the kind Those children are to be kept in Chicago during the full term of the exposition and are to be supported and cared for by the board of lady managers without expense to the government Another Indian request of a more peculiar character is held under advisement The secretary recently received an application from the manufacturers of a food for infants for permission to bring to the World's Fair an Indian squaw and her pappoose for exhibition as a part of their display The request has been referred to the commissioner of Indian affairs for report

An Old Fashioned Snow.

NEW YORK Feb 18.—During the past twenty four hours this city has experienced another old fashioned snow storm, one of the heaviest for the year During the night the flakes came thick and fast At 10 o'clock this morning seventeen inches of snow had fallen The numerous street car lines had a hard tussle with the heavy snow, and traffic was much delayed There was delay on the ferries from New Jersey to this city Throughout New York state there comes ... of heavy snow and interrupted travel.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Feb 18—Money on call easy with all loans at ... per cent, closed offered at ... per cents

Government bonds dull and steady In the two hours of business at the stock exchange today 693,000 shares changed hands, but of this amount over 514,000 were Reading alone, leaving only 179,000 for the entire remainder of the list. The figures sufficiently indicated where the interest lay and the general market presented few features worthy of note. The general tendency was still to break away from the influence of serious declines in Reading, New England and a few of the Industrials which have occurred during the week, and at one time a decided strong turn was manifested by some of the industrials and most railroad shares, and especially the grangers, which were bought to some extent for foreign account.

The street is inclined to take a more hopeful view of the situation and believes that the declines are about over, and brokers are disposed to advise their customers to buy again, believing that the influence of the banks' breaks has been seen in its full extent

Opponents of Home Rule.

LONDON, Feb 18—The ... of the week against the home rule bill was made on Thursday night by Lord Randolph Churchill. The Liberal newspapers have endeavored to weaken the impression made by his words upon the house, and have directed attention to the lack of slashing epigrams and venomous thrusts which once characterized his style. Although he has aged in appearance, Lord Randolph has not lost vigor in speech and all his auditors were surprised by the dignity and ... of his utterances. There is no doubt that as his friends have ... whispered, he is in training for high cabinet honors, which he expects to obtain with the next shuffle of the parliamentary cards Aside from his speech the home rule bill has dragged somewhat, as Mr. Balfour's speech was one of his weakest efforts and J ... Chamberlain added nothing to his reputation of the most vitriolic speaker in the house

The Cost of Gold and Silver.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Senator Stewart today submitted an exhaustive report from the senate committee on mines and mining relative to the cost of production of gold and silver. The conclusions drawn are that the cost of production of silver and gold is about equal to the established ratio of 25 3-10 grains of gold to 412½ grains of silver, and that in both ... the cost of production taking account of all legitimate investments is much greater than the coinage value.

A Tobacco Warehouse Burned.

Miss Wallis' father is dead. Her mother lives in New York and is very proud of her talented daughter's dramatic success. None of the family has ever been on the stage except Miss Gladys, and it is possible that she may leave it within a year or two, as a young gentleman of Danbury, Conn., expects to lead her to the altar before long.

Miss Wallis says that her principal ambition is one which she knows will never be realized—she wishes to be tall. She is less than 5 feet high and weighs exactly 100 pounds. She plays the piano, sings pretty and is a beautiful little creature of unassuming demeanor and charming conversational powers. Miss Wallis is what is known in the profession as a "quick study" and [...] memorizing her parts is amusement. She thinks Miss Martha [...] new play "Brother John" will be a success as it is a straight comedy and is exactly suited to Mr. Crane.

When the "County Fair" had its phenomenal run at the Union square theater New York Miss Clara Thropp the soubrette who played the part of Tagga made almost as great a hit as Neil Burgess himself. She was a veritable little bundle of energy and soon became very popular with theater goers. A single emphatic hit during a long run in New York city is usually sufficient to make a national reputation for an actress, and thus it proved in the case of Miss Thropp, for ever since she played Tagga her services have been in constant demand, and this, too, despite the fact that she exacts a very large salary.

Miss Thropp is barely 20 years old. She was born in Washington. When she was a little tot of 3 she was put on the stage by John T. Ford in a comedy called "[...] one." She has been an actress ever since. At the age of 8 she was engaged for the child parts in John McCullough's repertory and the promise then held out by her remarkable precocity has been more than realized by her subsequent work.

It is strange that Miss Thropp's first grownup part should have been the one in which she made the greatest hit. She did Tagga with Burgess for two years, and then joined Evans & Hoey playing Innocent Kidd, the principal soubrette role of "A Parlor Match." Her next engagement was with Hallen & Hart with whom as Pansy Weed in "Later On" she scored such a success that Manager T. W. Dinkins, who now controls the farce, has re-engaged her for her original part.

MISS CLARA THROPP.

Miss Thropp's income is not entirely dependent upon her stage work. She is a literary woman of no mean pretensions, and her poetry, she says, finds a ready market in the principal American periodicals. GOOD CHANCES IN REAL ESTATE!

WE believe that the present year is going to witness a great revival in real estate activity. The Cripple Creek mines will ship heavily as soon as the railroad is completed, and the money will be invested in Colorado Springs. The people who buy now will have the best chances to make good profits, as prices are low now. In order to help things along we have decided to offer some of our properties on easier terms than were ever offered in the city. That statement means something, for we have always been leaders in easy terms. Read the list carefully, it may enable you to cut rent off your expense list.

A [...] new house of six rooms, large hall, attic, bath, sewer and all modern conveniences, barn, full lot, for $4,1[...]. Terms $300 cash and $40 per month. The house rents for $32.50 per month.

A brand new modern house of six rooms, bath, sewer, all manner of kitchen and pantry conveniences, on car line, on corner lot and near school, for $2,000. Terms $[...] cash and $35 per month. Is worth $25 per month for rent. If you are paying $25 or $30 for some old style house it will be to your interest to see this.

A first class modern house of 4 rooms, cellar, bath and conveniences that are rarely added to any but large houses, for $1750. Terms $100 cash and $20 per month. Is worth $17 per month for rent. This is one of our best snaps.

Good level lots on high ground in South Colorado Springs, at $125 each. Terms $1[...] cash and $5 per month.

Eight acres of good garden land, near the city in the Fountain valley at $100 per acre on long time.

A house of [...] rooms, bath, sewer, cellar [...] on [...] Tejon street for $3,[...]. Terms $200 cash and $[...] per month.

A house of eleven rooms, bath, cellar, large barn, grounds 125x190, well improved with lawn trees, etc., and with room for three more houses, at actual cost, $[...]. Will trade for a higher priced residence and pay cash difference or will trade for vacant lots that are in good location to build on.

100x190 feet of prospective business property on South Tejon street near enough for the solid business quarter to grow to it in a few years for $[...],000 on easy terms. One of the best speculative bargains in the market.

Business Properties.

A central business property on Tejon street right in the heart of the business quarter for $18,000. Is leased for a term of years and the rents pay 11 per cent. Terms half cash. This is worthy the attention of any investor who is seeking a fixed income. Besides paying a big interest on the investment it will increase in value as rapidly as any property in the city.

A well improved Tejon property that rents at $2,100 per year, for $18,500 on easy terms.

$62\frac{1}{2}$x190 feet of splendidly located Huerfano Street property for $9,000. Terms half cash. Can be improved to bring a net income of 10 per cent. on the investment.

$1[...],500 is the price of a piece of Tejon property right in the heart of the city.

Boarding House.

The furniture and [...] of a 10-roomed modern house [...] as a boarding house, the monthly receipts of which are over $200. The furniture cost $1,[...], is almost new, but on account of other business the owner will sell for $700 cash. A good chance to make an easy living.

In the above list we have offered a selection of properties that will meet the demands of all classes of people and on easier terms than we have ever before offered property. For five years we have been selling homes on easy monthly payments that are but little greater than rent, and we refer you to hundreds of our customers to learn their opinion of the plan. The plan means simply that they use their rent money to BUY a home with. How does your rent account for the last five years stand? It is a good thing to do to begin paying for your own home, and when you are going to do a good thing there is no time like the golden present.

BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX

Any book by Dr Storrs is always sure to find … His … volume, a … of eight lectures on Bernard of Clairvaux and his times, just published by Messrs Charles Scribner's Sons should find a circulation wider than any of his previous works. Primarily a biographical sketch or series of sketches it is also in some sense a history of the century in which the Abbot of Clairvaux lived and died and of the two centuries preceding. It is therefore of great value and interest not only to students of theology and of church history but also to all who know or who desire to know something of the history of the tenth eleventh and twelfth centuries in Europe.

To most readers those centuries and especially the tenth are terra incognita, a period of chaos well deserving the name of the Dark Ages. These dark times are illumined in this volume by the powerful search light of the author so as to be no longer unknown, not only so as to present to us indeed a clear picture of the events that occurred therein but so as also to show us the animating principles of the age, the general trend and tendency of the events, and their influence upon subsequent times.

Of those centuries Guizot has said that there is the cradle of modern societies and manners, that modern languages date from these times, with modern literatures so far as these are national and original, that from thence are derived the greater part of the monuments now possessed, churches, palaces, city halls, works of art and works of utility, with almost all the great families that have played a distinguished part in affairs, while there are represented a multitude of important and splendid national events which strike with ever fresh force the popular imagination. It is, as he says, the heroic age of modern nations. After quoting this passage from the great French historian Dr Storrs goes on to say:

What more natural than that we should give, as opportunity offers, a closer attention to a period so full of vigor, contest and in many directions, of noble achievement, a period which has left ineffaceable traces on subsequent centuries and which cannot fail to be re-studied while history proceeds. It would be worth examination if only for the manifestation which it makes of the forces of human nature, the best and the worst, coming equally to light, as secrets of the seas are flung into sight beneath stroke of tempest. It becomes more worthy of consideration and study as we recognize the public tendencies there initiated or continued or violently thwarted, the vast progress there set in … of thought and law of national … of victorious Christian advance. … temper … to know that time is to gain a clearer and … appreciation of much which has followed in Church and in State. It is in fact, to trace … many things which … age is … to p…

The style of Dr Storrs is more splendid and ornate than is fashionable in these days, but in its rhetorical periods and balanced … there is a charm to which it is easy to yield and which, if one … yield to it, affords in itself a genuine and a high intellectual pleasure. Eloquence, of the older sort, seems … to be passing away from among us, so long as Dr Storrs lives it has still a worthy representative.

The age in which Bernard of Clairvaux lived was the age of the crusades. He himself must have heard, when a boy of the wonderful preaching of Peter the Hermit, and as he grew older, must have followed, with absorbed interest the progress or rather the regress of that Kingdom of Jerusalem which was founded by Godfrey of Bouillon. He himself was the prime mover of the second crusade, the preacher before whose words of fire the hardest hearts were melted, and who inspired in untold numbers the resolve to march to the relief of the Holy Sepulchre against the infidel. To his agency, more than any other, was due the foundation of the order of the Templars, who for a century and a half were the most splendid soldiers in Europe.

From our point of view it is a disputed question whether the influence of the Crusades was more of a benefit than a detriment to the development of Europe. They cost oceans of blood and millions of treasure, but they conferred some benefits upon Europe which perhaps could have been purchased at no smaller expenditure. Of the first crusade and its effects Dr Storrs says:

The effect of the crusade thus initiated was to stimulate to a degree before unexampled the general mind of Western Europe, to unite the people in sympathetic alliance for a magnificent enterprise on behalf of a remote and ideal end, to bring forth whatever chivalric quality was common to different classes in the state and to loosen in a measure the restraining bonds of that severe feudalism which had not only manacled but practically destroyed general society. It made the peasant as well as the prince the soldier of the cross. It compelled a wide and beneficent distribution of estates. It gave increase of wealth to merchants and artisans, who provided the vast equipment for the hosts. It expanded and lifted the popular thought, before wholly occupied with local affairs and with neighboring strifes. It brought Europe and Asia face to face as till then they had not been since the early Empire was divided. It tended in many ways to make the last decade of the Eleventh century a widely different period from either of the three gloomy decades with which it had begun. A wholly new freedom and energy of movement became … better … to come.

It was not alone as a preacher of the Crusade however that Bernard made his influence felt in Europe. He was the spiritual director of the Continent, the advisor and if need were the reprover of kings, emperors and popes. More than once he had occasion sharply to criticise the acts of all three and his admonitions were of the sort that must be heeded. Although simply the abbot of a monastery his authority was paramount to the orders of Archbishops and Cardinals. From his rude cell at Clairvaux he conducted a correspondence that … the affairs of a dozen kingdoms. Once he and he alone really elected a Pope and prevented by his sole authority such a schism in the church as actually occurred many years later and brought … Christendom. And all this he did simply by the power of his … personality and character. Even those … and labored with him, and men who knew him or knew of him were compelled to recognize his utter devotion to the service of Christ. … Self-seeking … of the world or of the pope … had no charms for him. With a single eye and an earnest and consecrated purpose he sought always the advancement of the Kingdom of Christ on earth and the attainment for himself of that Beatific Vision which since his time so many saintly souls have sought. For such a man the threats of soldiers, the displeasure of kings, even the anathemas of Popes had no terrors.

But though he was a saint Bernard was still a man. Frail in body although beautiful with a spiritual loveliness he was often … In … his mind like most … he was not broadly liberal. It was next to impossible for him to conceive that any who differed with him … be right. If … ness of disposition and his Christian love … would have been a … That with … of Europe … a saint of the church … his spiritual earnestness, his fiery zeal, his … of purpose and his utter … make a … age.

Of the eight lectures into which the volume is divided the first two are preparatory, giving a survey of the tenth and eleventh centuries, painting in as it were the dark background upon which the bright … figure of the … stands out in brilliant radiance. The remaining lectures deal with Bernard in his personal characteristics, in his monastic life, as a theologian, as a preacher, in his controversy with Abelard and in his relation to general European affairs. Thus to a certain extent each lecture is complete in itself, the whole being rather a series of tableaux than a continuous narrative. This arrangement adds to the rhetorical effect while it does not detract from the interest or spoil the continuity of the whole.

If space permitted it would be interesting to notice with some fullness the contest with Abelard which forms the subject of one of Dr Storrs's lectures. There is no more picturesque or dramatic scene in history, unless we except Luther's speech at the Diet of Worms, than the meeting of Bernard and Abelard at the grand council of Sens. No two men were ever more alike in some respects, more utterly dissimilar in others, but the likeness was superficial, the differences were radical. Abelard would not be regarded as much of a heretic in these days. The theory of the Atonement he first fully developed is that now held by the Unitarian church and by a very large part of the Protestant Episcopal communion. His theory of the Trinity is that … believed by a majority of intellectual Christians in our day. His views regarding the inspiration and authenticity of the Scriptures do not differ very widely from those that are urged by professors in many of our theological seminaries. But in his own day, and from the point of view of a mystic like Bernard, the notions of Abelard, and … the skeptical and often mocking spirit with which they were uttered, were utterly abhorrent and altogether abominable and the Abbot was sure that he was serving God in denouncing the famous lecturer and deposing him from his high place. The result of their contest was inevitable, it was spirit against intellect, tremendous moral conviction against skepticism and dialectics. The apostolic man won, and we think most readers, even in these skeptical days, will agree that on the whole he deserved to win.

The book is published in a form that comports with its contents. Its large clear type and white paper, its firm yet flexible binding and the lightness of it for its size and the quality of its paper, combine to make it a pleasant book to hold and to look at while the nature of its subject, and still more the splendid treatment of the author will fascinate the reader who once begins it and hold his attention undiminished to the end.

ZACHARY PHIPS

No period of our national annals is more fascinating than the first twenty years of this century. It was the time when Federalism was apparently dead, slain not so much by the onslaughts of Jefferson and his party as by its own internal … the time when Jefferson … he himself thought violated the Constitution by making the Louisiana purchase … was the time when that … Aaron Burr attained the zenith of his popularity and power and … undertook to carry out his daring conspiracy to found a new empire in the Mississippi valley. It was the time when British captains were boarding American ships on the high seas and impressing American sailors for the British navy. It was the time when the American people tired at last of this high handed violence went to war with the mother country for the second time to preserve the independence they had gained only thirty years before. It was the time when the Floridas belonged to Spain and when Andrew Jackson took them away from that power.

Taking these stirring times for a background Mr Edwin Lassetter Bynner in his Zachary Phips, published by Houghton Mifflin & company has produced a story of thrilling interest and … Zachary is first introduced … in the school of Master … in Boston from which … stepmother he promptly runs away. As … the author's purpose … the expedition of Burr … He … naval … the expedition … at Blennerhassett's island and here we have a fine … of that wonderful woman who perhaps even more than Burr himself was the … of the expedition. As … she was … After the failure of the expedition … Zachary drifts into the employ of a wealthy Louisiana planter who has an only daughter, the … of his heart. Inspired by his … and by his own ambition, Zachary studies hard, and becomes … an educated youth. Then he enlists in the navy, and has the fortune to be a midshipman aboard the Constitution in her famous fight with the Guerriere. Still later he happens to be in Mobile and the Chickasaw country during Jackson's campaign there and here we have a picture of the hero of New Orleans at his worst. His knowledge of this campaign leads to the summoning of Zachary to Washington where he has a private audience with President Monroe, and that leads to his appointment as Secretary of Legation in London under Minister Rush.

The possibilities of such a story are easily perceived and the author has used them well. A boy who begins the book will need urging to finish it and older readers will find it full of entertainment. Neither does the author make the mistake of constructing out of the raw Zachary an impossible hero. What he does might have been done by a boy of that period and just as great things and greater have been done by many an American lad. Of the love story in the volume we shall not be so unfair as to tell. It is enough to say that it is a good one and fresh and … .

Altogether this is a thoroughly wholesome book, patriotic, stimulating, interesting and well written.

THE HOME MAKER

Among the most attractive of all the February magazines, more especially for those home makers, the mothers and sisters and aunts, is the Home Maker. This magazine is what its name implies. It does not compete with such magazines as Harper's and the Century but it fills a place that no other publication exactly fills. While not a fashion magazine exclusively it does have a very good department of fashions, while not a magazine of fiction altogether it contains two serial novels and a number of short stories. The leading article in this February number is one on Whittier's home illustrated from photographs. Of the other articles and there is a large number of them we mention a few that are especially noteworthy. One on "The Father of Weavers" by Ernest Ingersoll finely illustrated tells of the baskets made by the Utes and other of our western Indians. "Jenny June" (Mrs. Croly) writes entertainingly of a trip from Paris to Antwerp, with numerous and beautiful illustrations. The department of Decorative House Art will be found suggestive and helpful by all women who have homes, for it is eminently practical. In "Homes and Home Building" there are some useful architectural hints, and other household departments are conducted on the same sensible and practical plan. It is undoubtedly the best magazine of its kind.

BRIEF NOTICES

The table of contents of The Social Economist for February is of various interest. The editorial article forcibly presents the proposition that trusts are not capitalistic conspiracies but legitimate and necessary commercial institutions, supports this proposition with facts and figures, admits and specifies the errors of these consolidations which have aroused public antagonism, and ends by suggesting the measures which shall make them of acknowledged public utility … the last link in an industrial chain more than a century long." Leaving statesmen and economists to deal with the "To Be or Not to Be" of the immigration question, Rev Edward Everett Hale tells us, if the immigrants are to come, how we should deal with them for their good and our own, suggesting that manuals of information be furnished by our consuls abroad, arrangements made for their reception here and systematic effort exerted to at least start them in the right direction toward honorable self-support. Gen Draper discusses the question of the division of profits between capital and labor, bringing the testimony of figures to prove that labor is receiving its full share under present conditions. Any increase, he says, must be an increase of the profits of capital as well as labor, must, in other words, result from increased production. The English worker's standard of living—his work, his wages, his home life—is briefly sketched by Tom Mann, member of the Royal Labor commission. In "An English View of the American Tariff" the reluctant admissions of an English free trade writer are quoted and commented upon. The industrial events of the month are chronicled in "The Month's Doings" and the sayings of various well known journalists and writers are passed through the fire of the crucible.

"The Unmarried Woman" is certainly a charming subject for a book full at least of variety and of opportunity for discussion in many different phases. Miss …, we presume the lady is herself unmarried. Eliza Chester has found the unmarried woman interesting in a volume with this title published by Dodd Mead & Co and her readers will find here a great deal that is interesting too together with much that is valuable. The author writes apparently from an intimate personal knowledge of the subject, and discusses the unmarried woman from many points of view. She has a good word as we all ought to have for the old maid, especially when that person is somebody's aunt. In our present civilization unmarried aunts are really indispensable and more particularly the kind who are aunts to everybody. We all know the kind and we all love them … advantage of their unselfishness and their ready helpfulness. But it is not only of this kind of unmarried women that Miss Chester writes. She tells us of business women and intellectual women, she treats of freedom and independence and … the … of children of friends and … the volume is worth reading and … worth … have read.

The … February number of … is … The present number contains an illustrated article on … new … Brooklyn … by W Nephew King, Jr, a story of the Chickamauga field by Captain Wm J Vance, a biographical sketch of Decatur by Colville Baldwin, an article on "The Capture of Major Generals Crook and Kelley," by John B Fay, war sketches by General Horatio C. King, "Crossing the Line," by George F Williams, who was a war correspondent, and a sketch of "Fighting Bob" Evans of the Yorktown together with an editorial department. The leading article is the music and words of the Star Spangled Banner with a picture of the flag in colors, and following that is Drake's famous Ode to the American flag. Unfortunately the editor prints Drake's name wrong in very large letters at the beginning of his first editorial as John Rodman Drake. Joseph would be surprised to find his name and fame thus perpetuated. The purpose of the magazine, Fraternity and Union, Now and Forever, is a laudable one. May it live long and prosper and so be able to print better illustrations.

Of making many books about the regeneration of society and the equalization of social conditions we are just beginning to see the beginning. The brotherhood of man is an attractive theme and there will be many Bellamys before the century is ended. One of these social philosophers is Charles Daniel, who has written a little volume called "Ai: A Social Vision," which is intended to be a novel but which is one part story to ninety nine of preaching. The hero of the book Ai is a man who enters the ministry and becomes Bishop of Philadelphia. He lives down town and persuades many others to do the same thing, and the city is regenerated by the contact of the upper and lower classes thus living in the same quarter and rendering neighborly service to each other. To any one who is concerned with philanthropic socialism Ai, which by the way is published by the Miller Publication Co will perhaps be found interesting.

The edition of "Minerals of Colorado" by Prof J S Randall is issued from the press of the Georgetown Courier. The manual contains in a convenient form a list of the minerals found in the State with their physical characteristics, chemical compositions and places of occurrence. Completeness could not be expected in a manual of this kind, for the resources of the State are by no means fully known. However the work is convenient and useful to students and professional men in this line. We are disposed to criticise the application of the term "Mexican onyx" to the variety of gypsum commonly called alabaster. The "Mexican onyx" is more properly aragonite, and the gypsum variety has already a well recognized common name. The book would be improved if a distinction were indicated between common and scientific names, and if there were appended to each paragraph a scale of hardness, one of the most useful of simple means of determinative mineralogy.

The March Short Stories contains much interesting and attractive fiction, among which are the following noteworthy stories, many of which are illustrated: "P… Bl…," a picturesque tale of the East, describing an Arab's love for his horse; "Reddy," a western story with a pathetic denouement; "A Vow," a love story translated from the Italian by Elizabeth Cavazza; "A Fair Smuggler," a R… tale of adventure; "The Last King of Yvetot," a story of France in the days of Louis XIV; "Loulette," a touching sketch containing a surprise for the reader, and "The Duke's Dilemma," a tale the scene of which is laid in one of the minor German courts.

There are prizes offered in the March Short Stories by the Current Literature Publishing Co. for the best Ghost story told in 3000 words, this competition being open to all, and for a story of College life, the author of which must be an undergraduate.

"Self Accused," by Frank Morton, published by G. W Dillingham and for sale by Q J Wellington of this city is a highly wrought story of love, crime, intrigue, travel and adventure. The hero is engaged to a young woman but suddenly breaks the engagement because he believes he has killed a man. He goes away and his travels enable the author to show some knowledge of the life and customs of the Hawaiian islands. Among other things there is a description rather short and inadequate of the hulu hulu dance. The hero and his beloved and her brother stay a long time at Honolulu and Hilo and finally somebody else confesses the murder and the racked and anguished lovers are united.

Our eastern exchanges continue to come in with scare heads like "Big Blizzard," "Great Storm … Sleet and Slush," and the like. On Monday one New York man did a thriving business running an impromptu ferry from curb to curb at the corner of Ann and Nassau streets. He put on a big pair of rubber boots and carried people across on his back for one cent apiece. And yet our Colorado sun … and … mud … is down below 40 and everybody here is happy.

[illegible] the eye for the interest and instruction of mankind. A most unnatural thing has happened in human development. The life of all ages has been [illegible] by sound.

All mothers from the mother bird to the mother woman teach their offspring by sound by utterance. But instead of continuing this natural process of instruction to the complete development of the mind an abnormal method has been substituted. The youth at a certain age is led into a world of science and there disguised to acquire if he can the painful use of [illegible] hieroglyphics. There he must study with the eye learning the sense of crooked marks which can at most signify no more than words. Also, how much of energy and life and thought have been wasted in the instruction of the mind by characters and symbols. How the eyes of mankind have been dimmed and eclipsed and the faculties overheated by this unnatural process of learning.

Man begins his acquirement of knowledge with words and he ends with words. But an unnatural civilization has taught him to walk the greater part of his intellectual journey by means of arbitrary systems of writing and printing. The fifth Columbian year will see him untaught—a hard thing withal and retaught on nature's plan of utterance. Nature teaches by sound only. Artificiality writes a scrawl. Nature's book is a book of words. Man's book is still a book of signs and symbols. Nature's book utters itself to the ear and man's book blinds the eyes and overheats the imagination. Nature's method is to teach by the ear and to save the sight for the discovery of place and beauty.

The fifth centennial of our discoverer will bring us the sound book in some form and with that the intellectual equipoise of mankind will begin to be restored. The use of the eye for the offices of learning in place of the stronger ear has destroyed the equilibrium of the human mind. That equilibrium must be restored. The mental diseases and unrest of our race are largely attributable to the overexcitement of the faculties through ages of seeing.

The age of hearing is to come with the Twentieth century. That age will restore the balance. Memory almost obliterated, will come again. The perceptions will cool. The inactuation will become calm and the eye itself will recover from the injuries of overstrain and regain its power and luster. Man will once more as the eagle [illegible] and know Shakespeare by heart. He will remember all knowledge and will [illegible] again a [illegible] of old from [illegible] Carthage.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH

Secretary Noble on the Development of the West.

[From Our Washington Correspondent.]

Said Secretary Noble of the interior department: "[illegible] tremendous changes in the [illegible] during the next 100 years [illegible] the far west. A century [illegible] the [illegible] will see in the plains and mountains [illegible] of North America an empire such as the ancients [illegible] ever dreamed of. All through that [illegible] much of which is [illegible] will be [illegible] populated, [illegible] the Aztecs ever had [illegible] in [illegible] in Mexico and Central America. Irrigation is the magic wand which is to bring about these great changes.

Last summer I traveled [illegible] in the far west and the effects of irrigation are indeed wonderful. Here runs a ditch skirted by a line. On one side is the desert, a land [illegible] only sagebrush and cactus grow [illegible] of its parched soil; on the other [illegible] fields of alfalfa, grain, vegetables, other crops, rich and luxuriant. The [illegible] produces three crops in a year and [illegible] splendid food for [illegible] cattle. It needs no prophetic eye to see this region [illegible] to irrigation and one of the greatest agricultural countries in the world. W[illegible] agriculture and mining [illegible] manufacturing will follow. The market will be constantly [illegible] instead [illegible] away.

Vast sections of our country now half [illegible] only by coyotes [illegible] will become the seat of the empire [illegible] years hence. I have no fear that America will grow too big. This republic is not going to get so large that it will fall to pieces of its own weight, nor will the people widely separated [illegible] far from lack of homogeneousness [illegible] sympathy.

[illegible] of the most [illegible] a time in the far [illegible] the people there [illegible] the people of the Atlantic seaboard. They are with us in the [illegible] in feeling in aspirations in patriotism. Indeed they have more patriotism than we seem to have farther east. The nearer one gets to the Canadian border the warmer appears [illegible] of the United States, the more [illegible] [illegible] at the stars and stripes [illegible] Montana on the British line [illegible] citizens who kept the flag flying day and night so anxious were they [illegible] their country and their loyalty to it.

Notwithstanding the vastness of our area and the immense distance between our far eastern and our far western [illegible] glows a very truly national thought appears

[illegible] as [illegible] has happily [illegible] this country [illegible] much [illegible] the railway and the [illegible] postal to [illegible]

[illegible] of the [illegible] at an [illegible] hour and I [illegible] early in the next century there will be a number of trains on some of the great roads where schedule time will call for [illegible] as 100 miles an hour. I [illegible] that a traveler early in the next century will be able to get his breakfast in New York and his evening dinner in Chicago.

We have already learned how to construct locomotives which are capable of making ninety miles and more an hour and we have learned how best to utilize their enormous power. Given the perfect locomotive—and we have very nearly secured the perfect model of this sort—we need only two or three other conditions. There must be a perfectly constructed track and roadbed. It must have inappreciable grades and very slight curves. It must be so made as to be elastic and yet withstand easily the strain caused by high speed. Then we must have a perfect signal system. That I am sure will be developed.

The block system of today is sufficiently thorough to make the high rates of speed attained by trains on my own road, for instance, possible. There should be no [illegible] [illegible] time [illegible]. Really sometimes and [illegible] cars must be light, but very strong and the number of them limited to a high speed train. We need the best coal and of course highly trained employees. With these conditions and they are sure to be obtained early in the next century—I feel safe in saying that regularly scheduled daily trains running 100 miles an hour will be advertised by many of the railway companies.

The question of safety and of popularity will be no more considered than are the same questions when a person enters an ordinary express train of the present time. With the conditions that I have described above a train running 100 miles an hour is just as safe as one running forty. In either case if an accident happens it is likely to prove disastrous. The tendency of the time is toward rapid travel and it has already been discovered that these fastest trains are not an experiment but are put on the roads in response to a public demand.

Secretary Charles Foster on the [illegible] of Electricity

[From Our Washington Correspondent.]

Secretary Foster of the treasury department looks to see the people of the United States traveling at the rate of a hundred miles an hour a hundred years hence by means of electrical motors. "While traveling in the west a few months ago," said the secretary, "I read in a newspaper the advertisement of the company which has projected an electric railway from Chicago to St. Louis. As I understand it they are going [illegible] in a businesslike way making contracts for construction having passed through the experimental stage and reached the plane of reality and commercial [illegible]. Their expectation is to make the journey from Chicago to St. Louis in two hours and a half or at the rate of a hundred miles an hour.

It occurred to me then that these men must know what they are about and that if a hundred miles an hour can be realized with safety and economy in this century it is not too much to say that 50 per cent greater speed or possibly 100 per cent will be reached a hundred years hence. Still, to be conservative and within the limits of the probable I will estimate that in the year 1900 it will be a common thing to travel from New York to Chicago in seven or eight hours.

I remember also reading a short time ago in one of Walter Wellman's letters that Thomas A. Edison, the greatest genius of this century, says electricity is terrestrial magnetism and that the universe is full of it. According to Edison the present system of producing electricity by friction is very expensive compared with what may be done by simpler processes. Edison believes electricity may be pumped out of the earth or the sea or the air just as water is pumped out of a stream, the only thing necessary being to find the form of pump that will do the trick.

This, I understand Edison is now working for and experimenting [illegible] and if we may estimate his future accomplishment by what he has already done he will succeed in finding the [illegible] that will extract electricity or [illegible] magnetism or whatever [illegible] from the earth at a cost so low as to [illegible] electricity the universal power. [illegible] the revolution that will come [illegible] if [illegible] one else [illegible] Given electricity at one-tenth the present [illegible] and electrical power will become universal. Steam and [illegible] sorts of power will be displaced and with the invention [illegible] as it will be [illegible] the extraordinary cheapness of the new power what may we not expect in the way of rapid transit, household conveniences, electrical carriages to take the place of horses, elevators in hotels and private houses and all sorts of machinery?

If the theory of Edison proves to be correct and the electrical experts are not mistaken in their plans for rapid travel the next hundred years will develop changes more stupendous than have been shown by the last hundred, in which pretty nearly every useful thing there is in the world has been invented. I cannot rid myself of the belief that we are on the eve of an industrial revolution as a result of electrical research and experiment and I take much comfort from the reflection that the people of the United States are likely to be the first to [illegible] of the new dispensation [illegible] is their wont to [illegible] more perfect and perhaps [illegible] of civilization."

Elijah W. Halford on the White House of the Future

[From Our Washington Correspondent.]

In the executive mansion of a hundred [illegible] [illegible] this enlarged [illegible] [illegible] been associated with it.

[illegible] often wondered [illegible] our [illegible] hundred years [illegible] the White House was [illegible] the 18th [illegible] a good serviceable and comfortable [illegible] only dedicated [illegible] Room. It is stated [illegible] In the enlargement [illegible] plans that suggested by the late Mrs. Harrison will be followed—preserving [illegible] the present structure and throwing [illegible] wings on either side. That would give room for the living apartments of the president's family, for the public offices and for the ceremonial or social functions which must take place in the president's house.

The White House of the future will therefore in my opinion be simply the White House of the present enlarged. I do not believe it will ever be found desirable to separate the president's residence from his office. My four years' experience here has convinced me moreover that in the future the private secretary to the president and his family should also be provided with living apartments in the executive mansion. The president of the United States finds it necessary to work nearly all the time, and when he works he wants his private secretary close at hand. This means the night as well as the day.

"Probably more than half the evenings of the last four years I have spent in my office busy either with my own work or standing ready to [illegible] the president. To do this I have had to [illegible] night after night, often at much [illegible]. The private secretary should [illegible] his home in a part of the executive mansion set apart for his [illegible] should be [illegible] [illegible] part of the law [illegible] which the [illegible]

"A hundred years [illegible] the United States will have much [illegible] work [illegible] though the country will be twice as [illegible] and the government [illegible] will to give [illegible] to a myriad of [illegible] which [illegible] this time and the [illegible] The president of the future will not, in my opinion, pay any attention to minor app[illegible].

"Every government [illegible] minister, foreign minister [illegible] bureau officers and perhaps a [illegible] or so of the most important administrative [illegible] will be filled by [illegible] of department with out so much as [illegible] with the president. Under the present system four-fifths of the president's time is taken with the minor appointments. He is [illegible] annoyed, worn out by the [illegible] so [illegible] that it is only by [illegible] sacrifice of comfort and strength that he is able to give thought and study to the important and serious matters of state demanding his attention.

"Mr. Blaine said to me a year or two ago that he believed the day was soon coming when a president would not permit himself to be both [illegible] and collectors and consuls any more than a railway president would [illegible] his time hiring brakemen and track [illegible]. My observation in the White House has been that some such change in administrative methods is not only desirable, but [illegible] [illegible] in the near future."

T[illegible] in [illegible] Civil War

Nothing important [illegible] Fulton's boat till the time of the civil war when the Confederates constructed [illegible] [illegible] to be driven by a screw worked by hand and submerged by the admission of water. The [illegible] were regulated by [illegible] or paddles [illegible] the sides of the boat, in much the [illegible] way as in the Bushnell boat. These boats were provided with floating [illegible] that dragged astern and were intended to explode by striking against the bottom of a ship under which the torpedo boat should pass. They had also torpedoes set on a spar standing out from the bow of the boat. One of these [illegible] torpedoes destroyed the federal blockader Housatonic, off Charleston, but the torpedo boat and her crew of nine men were also lost by being caught in the wreck of the sinking ship. The same torpedo boat had previously drowned 23 members of [illegible] crews by many accidents due to [illegible] St. Nicholas.

The Danger of T[illegible] Much [illegible]

Sir Richard Burton was exploring an unknown corner of Afghanistan and [illegible] adopted the disguise of a Mohammedan fakir. He played his part so well in one village that the inhabitants "formed a very high idea of his sanctity." Naturally he was pluming himself on his [illegible] when the elders came privately to him one night and begged him to go away at once. "Do not the people like me?" asked Burton in great surprise. "Indeed they do" was the reply. They were simply enchanted with his holiness. Indeed, they were considering whether it would not be a good thing to possess his tomb! Sir Richard made the best of his speed away. Indeed if his admirers had made their arrangements for his funeral he felt sure, as Artemus Ward observed, that "the corpse would be ready."—London Saturday Review.

No Credit For Being Good

Sometimes when a man tries to be good he never gets credit for it. One citizen of this town bought tickets for a big ball a few nights ago, and while the people in his office heard of it they twitted him and said "You'll be around here tomorrow with your head done up in a wet towel and won't be good for anything all day." Said he: "I resolved to give them a surprise. I went to the ball and didn't drink a drop of anything but water, went home as straight as a string and in the morning woke up with the nastiest kind of a bilious headache. But of course they wouldn't allow that it was anything but champagne. So far as people's good opinion is concerned, it don't pay very well to be good, does it?"—New York Sun.

The finest kennel of St Bernards was exhibited by [illegible] who captured among [illegible] Kennel club's special prize for the best kennel of [illegible] His dogs were very su[illegible] against the high [illegible] St Bernard [illegible] cently imported by Colonel Jacob Ruppert of New York. Moore won the open [illegible] novice class with [illegible] and the [illegible] smooth coated class with Melrose [illegible] and a Empress of Contoocook was declared the best American bred smooth coated bitch, and the colonel also received the silver medal for the best kennel of four rough coated St. Bernards.

To J. B. Lewis of Bellville O however went the honor of having the premier St. Bernard of the show. This canine was [illegible], a magnificent American bred 3-year-old bitch 33 inches tall and weighing 183 pounds. [She] fairly towered above the other dogs in her class, easily defeating Ruppert's $1 500 Kingstonian Beauty and his $9 000 Kingstonian Countess. Among the other very intelligent dogs exhibited was the Boston terrier Hector.

Many of the dogs exhibited at Chicago will also be seen at New York and Philadelphia and particularly at New York, because a first prize won there at the Westminster Kennel club's show is the highest honor that a dog can attain in America. Every year the entries at New York grow larger, and this year over 1 400 of the finest dogs in the world and representing every known and valued breed will bay at the myriad of miniature electric moons that stud the lofty ceiling of the famous Madison Square garden.

This immense number of entries to a show that has a higher entrance fee than any other similar organization in the world shows the great value placed upon Westminster Kennel club prizes by the dog fanciers of the country. For many years the club's entrance fee had only been $3 a head but in 1892 the number of candidates for honors increased to such an extent that the fee was raised to $5 a head. This move had little effect however and the entrance fees for the coming show will reach a total of between $7 000 and $8 000.

KINGSTONIAN COUNT AND COUNTESS.

Among the high bred dogs that will be greatly admired at New York are the world famous Sir Bedivere, the St. Bernard that cost $6 500; Colonel Ruppert's $3 000 Kingstonian Count, Kingstonian Countess, Beauty, Lady Gladwin and Empress of Contoocook. The [illegible] weighs [illegible] pounds and has won [illegible] first prizes. Marvel and Otto, new St. Bernards of magnificent proportions, are expected to make havoc among the best prizes.

The St. Bernards and Newfoundlands will be judged by a well known expert, Miss Anna H. Whitney—who has owned and bred both species [illegible] represent the high [illegible]

An odd feature [illegible] of the New York show will be the [illegible] kennel of St. Bernards [illegible] will show that [illegible] and mutton [illegible] turnips bread and milk [illegible] hungry human beings [illegible] from

A [illegible] actor too [illegible] adays is [illegible] of a pugilist [illegible] not [illegible] that if a pugilist is also an [illegible] he is necessarily very much of an actor. But [illegible] every [illegible] fight [illegible] country has shed his [illegible] over the footlights and at present has [illegible] Corbett is [illegible] in Gentleman Jack [illegible] Sullivan is having a [illegible] with The Man From Boston. Duncan Harrison is knocking together a play for Jack McAuliffe to knock out Jim Hall, Bob Fitzsimmons, George Dixon and numer[ous] lesser lights are seen [illegible] on the stage than in the ring and Peter Jackson the negro champion is soon to begin playing Uncle Tom and wants to try Othello.

JACKSON AS UNCLE TOM.

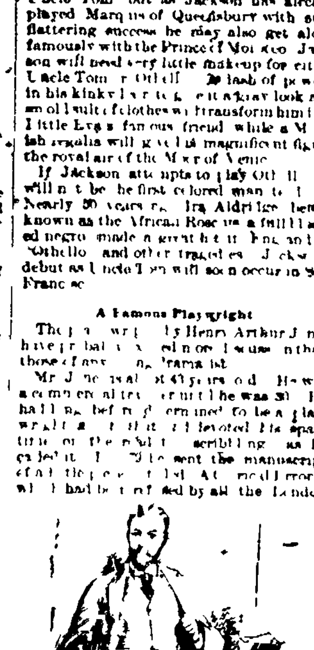

None of these new stars has avowed any intention of elevating the stage but a chance fight hand upper cut may do the business. Jackson is probably the most ambitious of the pugilistic Thespians. From Uncle Tom to Othello requires a long reach—longer perhaps, than from Jackson to Uncle Tom but as Jackson has already played Marquis of Queensbury with such flattering success he may also get along famously with the Prince of Morocco. Jackson will need very little makeup for either Uncle Tom or Othello. [illegible] in his kinky [illegible] look and [illegible] transform him into Little Eva's famous friend while a [illegible] the royal air of the Moor of Venice.

If Jackson attempts to play Othello he will not be the first colored man to do so. Nearly 50 years ago Ira Aldridge, better known as the African Roscius, [illegible] ed negro [illegible] "Othello" and other tragedies. Jackson's debut as Uncle Tom will soon occur in San Francisco.

New World's Fair Authorities will Take Care of Visitors.

[Special Correspondence.]

CHICAGO Feb. 16.—A Frenchman of distinction [illegible] who [illegible] in a prominent capacity the interests of the sister republic during the continuance of the World's fair and an American of equal distinction whose name is a part and parcel of the great project sat vis a vis at a table in the cafe of one of the swell at of Michigan avenue hotels the other evening. A lancer that did full justice to the American's fame as an epicure had been dispatched and the two Frenchmen [illegible] the pleasures of cafe [illegible] [illegible] man with grizzled features and that peculiar gray mustache and goatee which [illegible] remind one of frontier service entered the apartment. The American host and the new comer exchanged a military salute. Then the former asked

And how are things going in your department major? You are mighty lucky in having quarters [illegible] town and not being compelled to travel to the park these blizzardly days.

We are in the swim general was the response of the grizzled veteran as he [illegible] introduction to the Frenchman and reached [illegible] for the menu. Over 1 000 letters in the first mail this morning.

"Over a thousand letters!" ejaculated the Frenchman. Only he said it with that peculiar pronunciation that only those to the manner born can reproduce in print. That is what I would call one big correspondence.

That is comparatively nothing, monsieur replied the veteran. We will be getting them by the wagon load in a month or so. In The Frenchman shook his head shrugged his shoulders elevated his eyebrows and generally intimated that, as our Irish friends would say. He couldn't make it out begorra at all at all.

A goodly number of people were just as much surprised as was the Frenchman when the World's fair directorate decided to [illegible] and rooming department to the bureau of public comfort. They were inclined to look upon it as something of an aping of that system of paternal government that prevails in European countries but which has always been frowned down on this side of the Atlantic as hardly in consonance with the free air of a republic.

But the directorate argued that it was its duty to co-operate to the best of its ability with the citizens and householders of Chicago and vicinity in securing suitable and desirable lodging accommodations at fair and reasonable rates for expected visitors, on the ground that tens of thousands of people would be deterred from visiting the fair unless satisfactory assurances could be given them on this point.

What better assurance argued the directorate could possibly be given than the fact that the exposition authorities themselves would undertake to house them? As to the question of eating they could look after that without assistance. There will be plenty of restaurants and maybe, judging from the looks of things, plenty to spare. Anyway a man can get along on half rations if he is [illegible] comfortable place to sleep. Rest for the body and mind is infinitely more beneficial than gorging the stomach, when only a modicum of sleep accompanies it.

And so the World's fair people went into the rooming business. They divided the city into districts and sections, prepared an official register and invited parties who proposed to have furnished rooms to let next summer to send in a full description naming the prices, authorizing the department to inspect such accommodations, likewise authorizing it to let the same from day to day, week to week or month to month and to collect the rent in advance. The response was instantaneous.

Over 10 000 householders many of them well to do people living on fashionable thoroughfares and whose pride would not permit of their putting a "To Rent" sign in their window or even advertising vacant accommodations in the newspapers have already listed with the exposition authorities. These 10 000 can furnish facilities for 40 000 or 50 000 people nightly. Before the 1st of May it is expected the list will have doubled and it is not outside the province of probability that along in midsummer 100 000 people will nightly be thanking the forethought of the directorate for the comfortable rest they are nightly enjoying.

The modus operandi is very simple. A citizen of Ohio for instance writes the bureau of public comfort that himself and wife expect to take in the World's fair on the 11th 12th and 13th of August, that they have never been in the city before, that they are in doubt about being able to secure accomodations within their means and that they would like to know all about it intimating moreover that a certain figure is as high as they feel they can afford to pay per day.

The department replies that it has on its list just such quarters as the correspondent desires and at the price he names, and that if he will forward the amount called for covering the number of days to be spent in Chicago they will forward him a [illegible] certificate which will secure [illegible] himself and his wife the rooms engaged for the term and date selected. The citizen sends the money, gets a certificate in return and stows it away in his pocketbook. His worry and anxiety are things of the past. He comes to Chicago, finds his rooms ready for him, occupies them for the limit and goes away satisfied.

There is no [illegible] or bickering with the landlord or landlady. The latter gets his or her remuneration from the bureau of public comfort and has the additional satisfaction of knowing that [illegible] this system [illegible] protection is [illegible] against the deadbeat fraternity. This may be in theory paternal government but it is a kind of paternal government that [illegible] the present [illegible] tive [illegible] immense [illegible] next summer.

The Beautiful Bay Where the Apostle Paul was Shipwrecked—A Wanderer's Loving Companionship with Birds—Notes on the Feathered Songsters of Malta and Cuba—Child Training of Seal Fishers—Some Lonesome Lighthouses and Their Keepers

Copyright 1893 Edgar L. Wakeman

LONDON Feb. —When I first [illegible] north heights of Nasciar descending [illegible] the valley beyond and saw spread before me the Bay of St Paul a sense of awe mingled with glorious elation came with the [illegible] and beauty of the spot where the Apostle was shipwrecked. The bay which is about two miles long and one in breadth is situated on the northern coast of Malta and is hardly distant a brisk [illegible] from Valetta, the chief city of Malta. [illegible] excursions are made hither by water from Malta's capital and often the roads are filled with all manner of vehicles [illegible] curious pilgrims. I preferred [illegible] ing in the early morning and alone.

As I stood on Nasciar heights the sun was just rising above the promontory of [illegible] Kaura. Its rays fell softly upon the [illegible] ing waters. They gave the little [illegible] chapel a bright and smiling face. They [illegible] the shadows on the [illegible] where fishermen were lazily spreading their nets. They pierced the [illegible] and [illegible] the Mellitha slopes disclosing the huts and cabins of the lowly folk who are nearly as naked and quite as hatless of civilization as were their barbarian forefathers among whom St Paul was cast nearly two thousand years ago. They mellowed the grays of the massive walls of the ancient Salina [illegible] which crowns the Mellitha rocks to the northwest. And where the little island of Gzeier like a bit of the cliffs tumbled into the sea at the north showed its [illegible] surface between the blue of the bay and the sapphire of the sea they flooded the great statue of the saint with such transcendent [illegible] and seeming that the quickened fancy [illegible] an instant at least swept across the centuries and basked in the very presence of that far and mighty soul.

A winding road skirts the beautiful bay. An ancient wall half hidden with shrubs and flowers forms a boundary with a [illegible] pleasant roadway behind. The fishermen with their nets, some donkeys grazing at the edge of the hill slopes, seagulls in countless numbers, and a half naked lad urging along a herd of goats with rocks and pebbles were the only living things in view. Soon a kindly faced priest joined me. We wandered down the road together. He had come with the key of the little chapel which is set on that point of the shore on which tradition holds Paul's bark was wrecked.

As we came leisurely along the shore something in the water attracted my companion's attention. We stepped closer to the wrapping edge of the sleeping bay. The face of the priest showed momentary excitement, and he made the sign of the cross. There, softly bumping against a low lying shelving rock floated a water [illegible] piece of a broken spar—wreckage flashing instantly to the fancy a wilder scene of nearly two thousand years ago when the [illegible] Apostle found a hospitable friend in "the chief man of the island." It proved a startling incident to my guide. He recalled the tradition that since St. Paul's shipwreck within this very bay, no craft [illegible] [illegible] to pieces on this part of the [illegible], and not even a trifling hint of the [illegible] of the [illegible] had ever come to the shores as we had just seen. Ruminatively and much disturbed he led the way to the chapel.

It is a tiny chapel with an interior of utmost simplicity. But three of it pictures, whose subjects are the shipwreck, the miracle of the viper and the healing of Publius' father, are remarkable, while the [illegible] votive offerings, the good father told me, are very [illegible]. The priest's adieus and blessings followed me from the place and as I turned my steps towards ancient Citta Vecchia, the last object in St. Paul's bay my eyes [illegible] upon was the ledge of straggling rocks where the two [illegible] met. It was rimmed with a shimmer of glistening ripples as tiny shining and slumberous as though [illegible] echoing the dreamful songs of sirens inviting to a haven of endless sleep.

From my habit of wandering alone and in the country in foreign lands, I have come to regard their birds as my most charming chance acquaintances. I can recall no place where their companionship has proved so enlivening and [illegible] to me as in the almost sterile island of Malta.

Absolutely without [illegible] save the transplanted and nurtured like exotic flowers Malta would hardly be regarded as the haunt of birds. Yet I have seen or heard here in midwinter nearly every one of the [illegible] and humble sort well known in summer time in northern climes.

Along the stony roads I have kept exultant pace with the hopping stonechat and redstart and chirped back a cheery greeting to flocks of chaffinches among the white and gold of the orange trees. Climbing the cliffs, or pottering among the ruins the [illegible] of thrush or linnet have flooded the sky from the olive trees in the valleys below. Crossing the walled fields I have often come upon marshalled hosts of titlarks. Rooks, wrens, [illegible] and fieldfares all welcomed me in a homeland language I knew. The call notes of the [illegible] [illegible] of the sword and [illegible] and faces and as the balmy evenings came the [illegible] murmuring songs of the black birds [illegible] with half forgotten voices of ever haunting youthtide days and ways.

This recalls the exquisite pleasure I have enjoyed from my acquaintance with the birds and especially the songsters of Cuba. Their variety and [illegible] out the grounds of [illegible] plantation is an ravishing. It has been written that [illegible] birds [illegible] lose in variety [illegible] That is not [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Trinidad [illegible] Valle del [illegible] species of birds—the crow, the [illegible] the parrot [illegible] the [illegible] the [illegible] lady [illegible] and [illegible] are said to [illegible] these birds [illegible] homes [illegible] hours in [illegible] all of [illegible] shrubs [illegible] The [illegible] front [illegible] [illegible] large as our [illegible] The [illegible] song [illegible] [illegible] northern [illegible] and action [illegible] black [illegible] nests, and a yell [illegible] Their songs are precisely like those of the canary [illegible] stronger.

The negritos are here called black canaries. Their wings have a few dainty white feathers and their [illegible] The savanerie are [illegible] taste of the shorter [illegible] grasses [illegible] the form [illegible] thrush with dark [illegible] [illegible] delicately mottled [illegible] the frame and their cheery [illegible] endless. Other frequenters of the ground and grass about plantation houses are the other and the chinchinguaca.

They are alike black and in their resemblance to the American black bird in form and movement. Both are [illegible] but noisy. They flock in [illegible] cry [illegible] with the rythmic modulations of silver bells. [illegible] the totares sound their triple notes with rising scale as if questioning. Their [illegible] made in descending scale by the chinchinguaca. The notes are almost identical simply reversed. A singular fact is that when the former sing their tails spread laterally and the tails [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] trilling.

A curious incident of a great industry having almost its origin and [illegible] its necessary physical support from [illegible] dren's game came to my notice recently in Labrador. This game is called [illegible]. It is similar under its peculiar [illegible] that of your own children when they boisterously follow your leader.

It is indeed a wild and dangerous pastime but is heartily encouraged by parents as being at the basis of all success in seal hunting. When the ice begins breaking up in March, all Labrador and Newfoundland children hail the arrival of their annual play spell with joyous delight. [illegible] consists in leaping from one floating slab or pan of ice to another. The most daring of leaders are selected, and the sport is followed with tremendous vigor so long as the floating ice remains. Its utility lies in its educative power. The very expertness and bravery thus engendered are the supreme requisites in youths and men as seal hunters.

In the middle of the narrow straits of Belle Isle, between Newfoundland and Labrador stands weird desolate Belle Isle. It is the first land sighted on the gruesome coast. There is a lighthouse on its southern headland but no other sign of human habitation. The island is simply a tremendous monolith of [illegible] nine miles long and three broad rising precipitously from the sea at the outer entrance of the strait, with not an iota of verdure upon its iron-like sides and top. I once [illegible] close enough to Belle Isle in a little schooner, to supply its hardy keeper with a few newspapers and some comforting American tobacco which prompted this reminiscence from the skipper of our craft.

"Yes," he said ruminatively "only once a year any government vessel lands there and the storms are so terrible that every time we sailors pass and [illegible] to look up there fearing the light is blown away. How hard does the wind blow? Well I can't rightly give you the velocity but I can furnish facts. Twenty years ago [illegible] I well remember him a keeper named Vaughn had charge of the light. He got sort o' hankerin' after green things. Awful foolish but twas hard to git anybody to stay there at all, so they 'lowed him [illegible] for a garding. They took hull boat [illegible] of soil up there and made him a garding a acre big. Nothin would grow on it, but he liked to dig in it, probly. One evenin a whirlin sort of storm [illegible] sorter kept runn all night. When Vaughn poked his head out in the mornin he could not see the garding nowhere. He did not know at first but he was a leetle confused himself an' climbed back an took his bearins but ther was no garding nowhere certain. That tornader had just yanked up the hull sile an spilled it all over th' 'Lantic. Vaughn had spent he did. He would nt stand that. So he threw up the job an' took to shoving [illegible]

A few years since I found a lighthouse keeper in still greater misfortune than the Belle Isle keeper who lost his garden. This was while coasting among the Bahama Islands. It was at Double Shot Head keys at the edge of the grand banks of Bahama which you would pass, were you crossing the banks [illegible] as you entered the Gulf of Mexico. It is a dangerous spot in navigation, low ugly looking dreary and jutting out of the sea savagely. The English govern[illegible] ment has a lighthouse here. A half-dozen men, who make salt and the lighthouse keeper and his wife are the only souls who have existed here for a score of years.

The woman is a character. In England she was such a shrew that the government finally took cognizance of her [illegible] home and neighborhood [illegible] her husband [illegible] on the D[illegible] and isolated charge. The woman [illegible] incarnate fiends [illegible] her way. [illegible] the channel for [illegible] tween Cuba and [illegible] ing tribute [illegible] fear of her tongue [illegible] dread of her [illegible] [illegible] her pork beef [illegible] toes and the [illegible] her wrath and [illegible] Her husband is an humble [illegible] slave. Several half serious [illegible] tempts to rescue him [illegible] wreckers and [illegible] and Bahama [illegible] since this [illegible] has nearly [illegible] patna.
